READING SECTION:

Welcome to Our Home!

People often move into a new house. It's an important event. They have a party to celebrate it. It's called a housewarming party. Long ago, people warmed their house with a fire. Guests brought firewood as a gift. They put the wood in the fireplace. People also believed that fire kept evil spirits away. With time, housewarming gifts changed. In Russia, guests bring bread. It means people will never be hungry. In India, guests give rice. It means a long life. In the Philippines, guests throw coins into rooms. It's for luck. Today, people give many different kinds of gifts. What do you give in your country?
