READING SECTION:

Wonders from Waste

Old, worn clothes, used glass bottles, old children's books... What can we do with our waste? We can recycle it or upcycle it! So, what's the difference? Recycling is an industrial process. It involves breaking down used plastic, metal, and paper products into raw materials. These are used to make new products. For example, plastic bottles are first shredded into pieces. Then, they are melted down to create a thin thread. This is later used to make clothes, shoes, and bags. Upcycling, on the other hand, is not an industrial process. You can try upcycling in your own home. Put a cute ribbon on an old bottle to make a pretty vase. Or glue old books together to make a small table. Upcycling is a fun, creative way to deal with waste. Both recycling and upcycling are good for our planet. What will you do with your waste today?
