READING SECTION:

Life in the Snow

Tulok is an Inuit boy. He lives in Alaska. Some people call him an Eskimo. That means eaters of raw meat: His people don't like that word. Tulok's family fish and hunt for food. In April, they go out in boats and hunt whales. In June and July, they hunt for it and seals. They turn animal skins into clothing. In Alaska, winters are very cold and snowy. While hunting, Tulok's family make an igloo. An igloo is a small house. It's made from 10 ft H., of snow. An igloo keeps out the cold. Tulok likes to play in the snow. He can have snowball fights with friends. He can also ride a dog sled. Life in Alaska is so much fun!
