READING SECTION:

The Fast Man

Long ago, a French king was traveling across Spain. He was getting hungry, so he asked his attendant to find some food nearby. The attendant found a small house with chickens in the yard. The house belonged to a poor man. The attendant asked him to provide some food quickly for the king. The poor man found a couple of eggs. He broke them into a bowl, beat them, poured the mixture into a pan, and fried it. In no time, the meal was ready. The king watched the man prepare the meal. "Quel homme leste!" said the king, in French. That means "What a fast man!" 'Homme leste' sounds like 'omelet' so that's how the meal got its name. Omelets are simple to make when you need a quick meal. Just break some eggs, beat them, and fry the mixture. For different flavors, add ham, tomatoes, or onions. Try it!
